

ABSTRACT

A bipolar transistor and its fabrication are described. The extrinsic base region is formed by growing a second, more heavily doped, epitaxial layer over a first epitaxial layer. The second layer extends under, and is insulated from, an overlying polysilicon emitter pedestal.